20	Notes:	1	Harvard Kennedy School of Government is apparently not directly affiliated with JFK Library. Site is adjacent to University of Massachusetts Boston campus, but any other affiliation is unclear.
21		2	Meaning of this area, seen listed on NARA web site in July 2024, is unclear, since NARA plans a digital-only library, not bricks-and-mortar place open to public.
22		3	Includes (but not limited to) photographs, slides, film, video, 78 rpm records, and audio tape recordings. Portraits are probably considered artifacts. Audio and video in forms such as MP3 and JPG are probably considered digital items.
23		4	This value is assumed to be a total for the two separate locations (library + museum). NARA web site seems to be unclear.
24		5	Reported in 2007 that about 80,000 artifacts (of the ~93,000 that had been listed as belonging to the library) were missing (or misplaced, or may never have really existed). One arrest was made for a small number of thefts. No other details found.
25		6	General Notes: Numbers of records and artifacts is from NARA web site as of July 2024. Numbers probably increase slowly with time as additional donations are made.
26			Multiple older libraries are apparently converting some items to digital format. Example Nixon library web site has selected audio tape content available for download as MP3 with content as PDF.
27			Some have extensive grounds, parking, etc. Unclear is "grounds area" is "limited" by congressional act, or extent of NARA administration on these.
28			All museums charge admission. Library access for research is probably free.
